

45 ARE KILLED WHEN MILITARY AIR TRANSPORT FALLS IN FOREST

Plane Carrying Service Men and Civilians Crashes at Fort Dix, N. J.—All 21 Survivors Injured.

FORT-DIX, N. J., July 14 (AP)—A military transport plane, apparently caught in freakish air currents moments after taking off, crashed in a remote forest during a storm yesterday, killing 45 persons.

The 21 others aboard were injured, five quite seriously. Five women and two children were among the dead.

None of the dead was listed as from the St. Louis area. Second class airman Donald R. Nemeth of Springfield, Ill., was one of those injured.

The plane went down in a storm of rain, hail and lightning.

Survivors spoke falteringly of sudden, violent down drafts that shook the plane seconds after it left McGuire Air Force Base, adjacent to this huge Fort Dix military reservation.

The passengers were seated facing the rear, an innovation adopted by the British several years ago on the theory it would reduce fatalities in event of a crash.

Breaks into Fragments.

The plane rocketed to earth in an isolated, swampy woods, breaking into fragments, and ripping a 300-yard swath through the trees.

"Everything happened so quick," said Airman Albert J. Buck, of Philadelphia, who was knocked unconscious when the plane hit. "We were going along steady, hit a down draft and then she dropped."

Pvt. Thomas Kiley, of Lawrence, Mass., who staggered bleeding and dazed from the wreckage, said "a tremendous jarring" hit the C-118 before it veered into the boggy forest of tall pines.

"I saw things flying off to the side and then tearing and breaking," he said.

There were 66 persons aboard the plane, a 10-man crew, 50 military and six civilians bound for Fort Wadsworth Army Base, near Manchester, England.

Lt. Col. Richard Goss, of the air base, said there would be no statement as to the cause of the crash until an accident board looks into "all aspects of it."

Investigators Begin Work.

Investigators were on the scene today, probing the scattered remnants of the plane.

Its wings were ripped off, its fuselage broken in parts. Bits of cloth and equipment hung in the treetops. One of the four engines was nearly buried in the mud. Wreckage was scattered for half a mile.

An air safety team from Norton Air Force Base, San Bernardino, Calif., was flying here to join in the investigation.

The plane had been in the air only 90 seconds, a spokesman said, when it lurched and plummeted from an altitude of an estimated 500 to 700 feet.

The crash was about three miles from the runway.

"We hit some sort of down-draft when we needed power," said Sgt. Robert R. Ashley of Wrightstown, N.J., another injured survivor.

Passengers still had their seatbelts on when the crash came. Some—both among the dead and the injured—were still strapped to their seats when rescuers reached them an hour later.

GAS HOUSE GANG ON JOB AGAIN

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—Marilyn Monroe crossed her shapely legs for the first time in Britain today—and started a mild riot.

It happened at a press conference at London airport 45 minutes after the American film star arrived to make a movie with Sir Laurence Olivier. About 100 reporters, photographers and television men were on hand.

"Please sit down," said Olivier with his wife, actress Vivien Leigh, at his elbow. Miss Monroe sat. Then she gave a tug at her tight-fitting skirt, revealing a goodly part of her shapely left leg.

Another cameraman was thrown to the floor. He screamed as someone tramped on his hand.

By this time the photographers had wedged Miss Monroe, her playwright husband Arthur Miller, and the Oliviers into a corner.

"Please sit down," said Olivier with his wife, actress Vivien Leigh, at his elbow. Miss Monroe sat. Then she gave a tug at her tight-fitting skirt, revealing a goodly part of her shapely left leg.

It started all. One photographer dashed into a newsreel camera, knocking it to the floor. Another leaped forward and fell on his face.

A wall of photographers pounced toward Miss Monroe. Police stopped them. The news conference began.

"Are all your conferences like this?" asked a reporter.

"Oh," said Miss Monroe in a

CHARGES REVEAL HIJACKING RING IN STATE PRISON

JEFFERSON CITY, July 14 (AP)—James T. Riley, Cole County prosecuting attorney, filed armed robbery charges yesterday against two convicts and said it was the start of a drive to break up hi-jacking inside the State Penitentiary.

Kenneth Hood and Ray E. Warren, were charged in magistrate court with forcing another convict to give them his commissary card. Their preliminary hearing was set for July 26.

Hood, is serving 15 years from Jackson county for assault and attempt to kill, kidnapping and robbery. Warren, is serving 30 years from St. Louis for armed robbery.

The two said hardened convicts have been shaking down new comers to the prison at knife point and threatening reprisals if the victims "squeal" to prison authorities.

LABOR LEADER IN EAST GERMANY CRITICIZES REDS

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Edition

BONN, July 14—A remarkable attack against "unjustifiable" demands on labor by several East German Communists was made in East Berlin yesterday by Otto Lehmann, secretary of the East German Communist Trade Unions.

Lehmann's angry charges, published in the Communist labor paper Tribune, demonstrated that things are stirring in East Germany as well as in the other satellite states.

Lehmann disclosed that in several East German factories workers have recently become "restive" and have "rejected" new demands by the Communist government for increased output.

It was the first time in memory an East German Communist labor leader had raised his voice in the United States. He slipped a message to reporters asking them to contact Mrs. William L. Farmer, of Chicago. The message said, "Please send me money." He did not indicate his relationship to Mrs. Farmer.

Jakab, the coup had been planned long in advance and the plotters had decided to seek haven in West Germany.

Yesterday their chance came. All seven, including a young woman, bought tickets for Szombathely, a provincial city, and boarded the plane at Budapest.

Prearranged Signal.

One of the other rebels, Gabor Kiss, a Budapest student, said at a prearranged signal in which Polyak shouted "Look, there's Gyor (a Hungarian town)," the plotters pulled out their concealed iron rods and began hitting the other passengers.

Nixon said no decision had been made on whether he would make whistle-stop speeches in this fall's campaign.

He turned aside other questions about campaign plans, saying, "It would be quite foolish to indicate now" the Republican strategy. However, he said this did not necessarily infer that the party had "surprised" up its sleeve.

He emphasized that his political talk with the President was "general" and "brief."

Chotiner Discarded.

Reporters asked Nixon whether his campaign manager this fall would be Murray M. Chotiner, who directed his campaign in 1952 and earlier years. The Senate investigating subcommittee is looking into Chotiner's law practice from the time Nixon became Vice President.

Nixon replied that Hall already had said the national committee would not use Chotiner's services this year.

"The national committee will handle the campaign of the presidential and vice presidential candidates," Nixon said.

"In 1952 the national committee was not set up in staff, and it was necessary to obtain additional help. It is now staffed, and will handle the campaign of the (candidates for) President and Vice President—whatever that is."

Nixon said he reported to the President on his seven-nation Far East tour and made some recommendations about administration of the mutual security program in the areas he visited. He would not discuss the nature of his report.

Legislation Discussed.

He said he and Maj. Gen. Wilton E. Persons, White House liaison with Congress, discussed the congressional situation with Mr. Eisenhower.

He said he told the President he believed the Senate would hold to the four billion Foreign Aid appropriation bill approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday, resisting efforts for further cuts.

He said Mr. Eisenhower would be satisfied with that amount.

He said he found Mr. Eisenhower in "excellent" spirits.

"That's one of the remarkable things—he has bounce," Nixon said. "He bounces back from these physical bouts that we all have. That is the time when his optimistic attitude stands him in good stead."

CAMPAIGN PLANS ARE DISCUSSED IN NIXON'S TALK WITH PRESIDENT

But Vice President Says 'It Would Be Presumptuous' to Claim He Had No. 2 Spot on Ticket.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 14 (UPI)—Vice President Richard Nixon talked second-term "campaign plans" with President Eisenhower today. Nixon said his own political future was not discussed.

He told reporters after a 75-minute meeting with the President that it would be "presumptuous" for him to assume that he would be renominated for Vice President by the Republicans. He said, however, that he would be "willing and honored" to accept the nomination.

Nixon said there is no doubt that Mr. Eisenhower will be renominated. But he said it would be "presumptuous" to assume that he would get the No. 2 spot on the G.O.P. ticket.

Reporters asked Nixon why he felt there was any doubt that he would have second place on the ticket.

"As you all know, in any campaign where votes are counted, the decision is never made until the count is completed," Nixon said. "I'm not going to indicate that it is conclusive."

However, he added: "I will give my opinion that it is conclusive as far as the President is concerned."

Repeats Statement.

As for his own renomination, Nixon said, as he did in April, that it is up to Mr. Eisenhower, the Republican convention.

Nixon said he would do whatever job he is called on to do "and let events take their natural course."

Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall reported Thursday after a meeting with Mr. Eisenhower that the President made it "absolutely clear" he would be "pleased" to have Nixon as his running mate.

Hall himself had said that the G.O.P. national convention which starts at San Francisco Aug. 20 will name an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket again.

A reporter asked if Nixon knew of any other candidate for the G.O.P. vice-presidential nomination.

NEW WEAPONS MIGHT LEAD TO CUT IN FORCES, RADFORD SAYS

Rakes Report of Proposed 800,000-Man Slash — Latest Concept Would Force Policy Revisions.

By ANTHONY LEVIERO

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON. July 14—In the midst of a new storm over defense policy Adm. Arthur W. Radford asserted yesterday that the "introduction of new weapons" might ultimately make possible a reduction in military manpower.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff characterized as "a mixture of fact and pure speculation" the views attributed to him in the New York Times yesterday.

The dispatch referred to said the chiefs of the Armed Forces had rebelled against a proposal by Adm. Radford to reduce the military strength of the United States by approximately 800,000 men by 1960.

The dispatch said also the political implications of such a reduction had caused high officials to stop work on the joint strategic objectives plan for 1958, 1959 and 1960 until after election day. The story said the Radford proposal indicated in effect a substantial withdrawal of United States forces in Europe and a resort to a fortress America concept.

Denley Planning Delay.
Adm. Radford stated the Joint Chiefs of Staff had not been relieved of the annual requirement to advise on the pattern of military forces in the foreseeable future. He explained the work will continue until the studies are presented to Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

Competent Pentagon sources repeated that the studies will go on in the Army the Navy and Air Force staffs but that decisions at the Defense Department level on the joint strategic objectives plan will not be made until early next year.

Adm. Radford issued a formal statement yesterday as the chambers of Congress echoed with demands for explanations of the reported Radford proposal. If carried out, the 1960 Radford concept would effect a radical change in the military and foreign policy of the United States, according to informants who disclosed the profound split in the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"The individual who attributes certain definite views to the chairman," said Adm. Radford, "is anticipating conclusions which the chairman himself has not yet reached."

Three Vital Points.
"There are three points which must be made at this time."

"First, it is possible that manpower requirements for the future security of the United States can ultimately be lowered because of the introduction of new weapons."

"Second, it is a fact that the United States has military obligations in connection with the security of the free world which it will not unilaterally change."

"Finally, it should be remembered that the planning effort of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is always the first step in a complicated chain of national planning — planning which ultimately has to go to the highest level in the executive branch and later to the Congress."

Adm. Radford said also there was "no doubt" the story "was based on partial information obtained from an individual or individuals who had assisted in the staff work of this summer's planning and who had only a limited knowledge of the overall planning problem. As is usual in leaks of this kind, there is a mixture of fact and pure speculation."

Approved by Wilson.

Secretary Wilson said he approved of Radford's statement. He replied also to a letter from Representative George Mahon (Dem., Texas), chairman of a House Defense Appropriations subcommittee, requesting on July 3 information on the validity of rumors that the armed forces would be reduced. Wilson told Mahon that planning was incomplete and budget recommendations would come later this summer or early fall.

The fundamental conflict in the Joint Chiefs of Staff concerns the emphasis being placed on national security policy on massive retaliation with nuclear airpower to deter war. Adm. Radford is known as one of the foremost exponents of this concept.

Opposed to this concept is the Army, which believes conventional ground forces are being cut so much that eventually the United States would have no alternative but to rely on its mass destruction weapons to deal with brushfire wars as well as general war.

Studies Ordered.

Meanwhile it was learned that Secretary Wilson several weeks ago required the armed forces chiefs to submit studies of the effect of a reduction reported to exceed 15 per cent of the present defense program. This would be a reduction of the fiscal 1957 program with its appropriation of more than 36 billion dollars and total forces estimated for June 30, 1957, of 2,865,258. (The actual strength

Tito, Nasser Agree on Agenda For Conference With Nehru

Belgrade Cleaned Up to Impress Egyptian; Yugoslav President Urges Aid to Needy Through U.N.

By BARRETT McGURN

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch

BELGRADE, July 14 — All houses along a mile-long stretch from the airport have been repainted in a reddish wash to give Egypt's President Gamal Abdur Nasser a good first impression of Yugoslavia. The repainting is one of the sidelights to the meeting of the east Mediterranean two strong men—Nasser and Yugoslav's President Josip (Tito) Broz.

There was also a huge job of ditch cleaning along the road from the airport to the city.

The road long has been known for ditch-wallowing pigs and fluttering geese, but before Nas-er saw it yesterday a profound job of cleaning apparently banished them to back yards.

No such clean-up was done for Soviet Communist Party

Chief Nikita S. Khrushchev

when he visited Yugoslavia according to newspaper men here.

Questions for Nehru.

Tito and Nasser, at conferences during the day, agreed on questions they will suggest to

Indian Prime Minister Nehru

as an agenda for a conference next week on the island of

Brioni, Tito's Adriatic sea re-

Stand Not Changed.

Tito declared all countries have the right to be free. This was the position he took when he rebelled in 1948 against

Soviet direction of the Comin-form and which resulted in that organization. His associates say he has not changed that stand in spite of his re-establishing of cordial relations with Moscow.

President Nasser, replying, said "a large number" of the peoples of Asia and Africa were still victims of colonial oppression, which he condemned.

Tito remarked that all problems can be solved by peaceful methods, including those in the area of which Egypt is a part. This implied that Tito would object to the use of force in the settlement of Egypt's dispute with Israel.

of the forces as of May 31 was 2,814,632.)

This information coincided with other information to this effect: The Defense Department has issued "guide lines"

for fiscal 1958, beginning July

1, 1957, for a 500,000-man reduction, including 200,000 in the Army, 200,000 in the Navy and 100,000 in the Air Force.

Reduction of this magnitude would amount to nearly 20 per cent reduction.

The budget "guide lines" are not necessarily binding, and yesterday's dispatch stated that a proposal to cut the Army in fiscal 1958 by 200,000 had apparently been scaled down to about 80,000 to 100,000.

Previous Statement.

In a press conference at the annual meeting of defense officials and leaders recently at

said without equivocation that further manpower reductions were under study.

There are two separate studies going on and the Radford statement did not distinguish between them. First is the budget-making process for 1958. In this the armed services submit estimates that usually are acted on in the fall as the President prepares his

State of the Union and budget messages. They have already submitted figures totaling 48 billion dollars and Wilson has served notice that he is considering a budget of about 38 billions.

The other process is the three-year look taken in the joint strategic objectives plan and deals not with money but with strategic problems facing the United States in relation to its potential enemies and the forces that would be dealt with at the present time.

Fiery Crosses Set Up at Homes Of Warren and Frankfurter

WASHINGTON, July 14 (AP)—Fiery crosses were planted near the residences of top Washington officials and a county chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People early today.

Police said crosses were burned in front of the hotel residence of Chief Justice Earl Warren and the homes of Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter and Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff.

Officials said two George Washington University students discovered and kicked over a burning cross in front of Sobeloff's apartment house in northwest Washington. They said a partly burned sign bore the words "Sobeloff", Jew.

A six-foot cross, still smoldering, was found on the lawn of Frankfurter's home, and an eight-foot one was burned in front of the home of Mrs. E. Sobeloff.

Congressional investigations are under way into the burning of crosses.

Washington, D.C., July 14 (UPI)—Douglas King in nearby Beltsville, Md., is N.A.C.P. chairman for Prince George's County.

A spokesman for the Sheraton-Park Hotel denied a cross was burned there, but police said witnesses saw two men in a car with Virginia license plates drive up, plant the cross and set it afire. The hotel is the home of several top Washington officials, among them Warren and Senator Herbert Lehman (Dem.), New York.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation joined police in investigating the cross burnings, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. announced.

Warren heads the Supreme Court which rendered the school desegregation decisions. Frankfurter is a member of the same body. Sobeloff appeared for the Government in arguments on how to implement the decisions.

BONN SOCIALISTS VOTE AGAINST TIES WITH REDS

Ollenauer Re-elected —To Work for Unity
by Loosening Link
With West.

MUNICH, Germany, July 14 (AP)—The West German Social Democratic party yesterday emphatically reaffirmed its determination "never" to co-operate with the Communists.

There was thunderous applause when speakers said there could be no partnership between democratic socialists and dictatorial communists.

The party convention then unanimously re-elected Erich Ollenauer as its leader in the campaign to unseat Chancellor Adenauer in next year's general election.

Ollenauer's re-election was renewed backing for his program of loosening West German's military ties to the West while promoting the maximum diplomatic relations with Russia and the eastern satellites to gain the long-sought reunification of Germany.

The wings and three motors broke off as the plane tore through the trees. Col. John Williams, commander of the 161st Air Transport Group, said the gas tanks in the wings that were separated from the fuselage, preventing any fire.

The rain was heavy and the weather conditions in the general area changed during the afternoon. Only a few minutes before the take-off a thunderstorm had rumbled across the area with blinding rain, hail and lightning.

Col. Williams said that at the time of the crash the plane normally would have been 500 to 700 feet high and traveling about 175 miles per hour.

Physician Quotes Survivor.

Lt. Col. Horace W. Doty, an Army physician, quoted Airman Albert J. Buck, as saying the ship hit an air pocket. Buck suffered a fractured ankle.

No sound of the crash was heard at McGuire.

HEAD OF CHICAGO BANK LINKED TO $500,000 HODGE INQUIRY RESIGNS

E. A. Hintz, Southmoor President, Quits Without Explanation — Under Subpens to Appear Monday.

CHICAGO, July 14 (AP) — The president of a Chicago bank linked with the tangled affairs of Orville E. Hodge, Illinois state auditor, resigned last night.

Edward A. Hintz quit as head of the Southmoor Bank & Trust Co. without making any public statement about the factors governing his decision.

Hintz is under subpens to appear Monday in Springfield before the Sangamon county grand jury to relate his bank's part in dealings with Hodge. Hodge, of Granite City, is under subpens also but he is scheduled to appear a week later, July 23.

Bank directors accepted Hintz's resignation and announced as his successor, C. T. Ireland, a senior head examiner in the Chicago office of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Officials of the Southmoor bank were served a federal subpens a few hours before Hintz decided to resign. The bank was ordered to produce its records from December 1953 to the present for examination by the July 23 grand jury, which meets Tuesday.

The bank has been linked by George P. Couturakon, Sangamon county state's attorney, with the cashing of warrants from auditor Hodge's office.

40 Warrants Canceled.

Couturakon said about 40 warrants, worth more than $500,000, were cashed. Many of them, he said, were cashed "under questionable circumstances" at the Southmoor bank.

State Treasurer Warren E. Wright personally appeared yesterday at the Southmoor bank, demanding reimbursement to the state of 21 warrants worth about $260,000. Bank officials refused, causing Wright to announce he would start suit to recover the funds.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation also entered the case yesterday, requesting the State Treasurer's office in Springfield to supply copies of the state warrants under question. The copies are to be used in connection with FBI's investigation of Southmoor's activities in possible violation of federal banking statutes.

Gov. William G. Stratton has asked Hodge to resign from the Republican ticket for the November elections. Hodge is seeking re-election. Stratton, also a Republican seeking re-election, has demanded that Hodge double his $50,000 surety bond by Aug. 1 or be ousted from office.

Employees Questioned.

Meanwhile Couturakon has begun questioning of all employees in the auditor's office to try to unscramble the puzzle of the missing checks. He has pointedly implied that his investigation would be speeded up if Hodge were replaced.

"Anyone could give me more help than he has," Couturakon said yesterday. "The present auditor has provided absolutely zero co-operation."

Hodge has refused to supply Couturakon with the names of any employees that might provide information about the missing checks.

Couturakon also demanded that Hodge waive prosecution immunity when he testifies before the grand jury.

Chicago police officials announced yesterday they plan to file charges against Patrolman William D. Lydon, 47 years old, whose name has been linked with an investigation of missing warrants in Hodge's office.

Didn't Tell of Indictment.

Police Commissioner Timothy J. O'Connor said he would seek would be deprived of gas service.

At last night's meeting of the union, held at a hall at 6141 Elzey avenue, Wellston, Levin told the workers that "we have as good a record as we could ever have to go up on appeal."

Rogers' Testimony Is Key.

He said testimony given at the hearing by Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the State Board of Mediation, that Lacled employees were not employees of the state under state seizure, framed the question of the law's constitutionality—"whether you the strikers" can be ordered back to work for a private company.

Leaders Urge Return.

All union leaders urged the members to vote in favor of the union executive committee recommendation that the injunction be obeyed. Only four or five men voted against the recommendation.

Earlier, Appelbaum said the sides in the contract negotiations were getting closer to a wage agreement. The company has offered a 5 1/2 per cent wage increase and the union is demanding a 6 per cent rise, he said.

In talks yesterday, he said, the company agreed to grant a fourth week of paid vacation to employees who have worked 20 years or more. The company also agreed to a one-year rather than a two-year contract, he added.

Still pending as a result of the strike are suits filed by the state asking for $35,000 in financial penalties against the three union locals and union officers.

Under the King-Thompson Act, the state can ask for $10,000 in penalties against a striking local for each day of a walkout after state seizure of a utility.

The suits against the Lacled workers under were filed last Saturday, six days after the strike began, July 1, and two days after state seizure of the company.

The workers applauded the two men and Joseph Appelbaum, international vice president of the union, who made a sharp attack on the King-Thompson Act and Lacled officials.

"This struggle has been a valiant one," he said, "a fight for freedom to exercise our rights as citizens."

civil service action against Lydon, on the ground that he did not indicate on his police application that he had been indicted or convicted of a crime. O'Connor said this application will provide the nucleus of the civil service charges against the policeman.

Lydon is president of Fabricraft Sales Co., which has received nearly $300,000 in controversial warrants from Mr. Hodge's office. Couturakon said Lydon's firm has received four of the missing warrants, and may have gotten more.

A warrant, such as those involved in the current investigation, differs from an ordinary check in that it is non-negotiable. Only the corporation or individual it is made out to can cash it, and it cannot be endorsed from one holder to another.

Associate of Hodge.

(The Associated Press said Lydon is a close business associate of top Hodge aids. Lydon, reported en route to Chicago from Florida, is president of the Ilini Investments, Inc.

Lloyd E. Lane, personnel director for the auditor's office, is secretary-treasurer of Ilini, and Edward A. Epping, Hodge's office manager, and John Kirincic, head of the property division, are directors.

The same four men are officials of the Professional Men's Association of Illinois, a firm which buys due bills at discounts and collects them.)

REUTHER URGES DEMOCRATS TO ADOPT "LIBERAL VIEWS"

DENVER, July 14 (AP) — President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers has called on the Democratic party to adopt "liberal and progressive views" if it wants to win the presidential election. "They should be moving boldly ahead on all fronts," Reuther said yesterday.

He is for a conference of the 85-member executive board of the AFL-CIO's industrial union department, of which he also is president, Reuther asserted to those who have "no moral right to a program."

The Democrats, he added, "cannot compete with Eisenhower in the area he has staked out for himself." Reuther said if the Democratic party "attempts to be all things to all people, it will lose and will deserve to lose the election." He declared the Republican party slogan of "peace and prosperity" does not hold water.

The Eisenhower Administration must face up to the facts of life," Reuther told a news conference. "It is complacent while it should be moving ahead. Peace in the world is uneasy and prosperity at home is uneven."

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always support privileged citizens and predatory plutocrats; never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty. ## LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For Fewer Tax Elections'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Your recent editorial entitled, "For Fewer Tax Elections," is most constructive, timely and appropriate. However, the problem you raise is not confined to the City of St. Louis, but is state-wide.

Most of the school districts throughout the state now have to vote a tax levy in excess of the amount which the board can levy. For the voters to be able to do this by a majority vote for a period up to four years would enable the school districts to have fewer school elections and thereby save the taxpayers some money.

But in order to secure the adoption of a constitutional amendment one should be developed that would have state-wide appeal. I suggest that such an amendment contain the following essential features:

First, a provision to enable the board of education to levy up to 15 mills annually without approval by the voters. Such a levy with an adequate state contribution would enable most school districts to finance their current educational programs without holding a school election.

Second, in all school districts which have to vote an additional tax over and above the amount which the board could levy, make it possible to do so by a majority vote for a period of not to exceed four years.

Such a constitutional amendment would reduce very materially the number of school elections to be held annually. And it would also have state-wide appeal and thereby have an excellent chance of being adopted by the voters.

Two Chickens in Every Pot

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The old promise of a car in each garage and two chickens in every pot is about to be realized, even though it's about 25 years late.

Our nation is car poor, and any guy who can scare up a buck should have two chickens in his pot. They are just that cheap down on the farm.

Eggs are 28 cents a dozen for farmers, but the same eggs to the consumers are 50 cents a dozen.

One more four-year term of the present Administration, together with its majority of Rep-O-Crat lawmakers from both parties, and we can reasonably expect a landslide vote for a Socialist Government that won't quit. DOC DUNCAN.

Olive-Vandeveer Incident

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The following is a classic account of how not to perform police duty and combat teen-age hoodlumism.

At midnight July 3 a westbound streetcar stopped at Vandevener and Olive street. A youth about 17 or 18 years old came out of a bar east of Vandevener and for no apparent reason smashed a window in the streetcar showering the occupants with glass. Two policemen were across the street on the west side of Vandevener.

The automobilist pulled up abreast of the officers and told them of the attack. Passengers told the officers the youth could still be seen back across Vandevener. The "alert and energetic men in blue" took out pad and pencil and got the operator's name and told him to report it at the car sheds. One of the passengers offered the last name of the offender but was rebuffed.

It was a hot night. The car went on. So did the officers. So did the offender, probably to feel he got away with something. A sprint of about 100 feet would have netted the hoodlum but it was probably too hot and humid. What kind of policemen are they enlisting these days? However, let's be charitable. Maybe the officers were afraid of the young hoodlum.

Why Not Radar?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Your timely editorial "Airliners and Pilot Vision" raised pertinent questions regarding the recent tragic double crash into the Grand Canyon. My question is this: During the last war, large bombers were equipped with radar screens showing proximity of planes in all (six) directions. Why not now?

Rule for 66's Three Lanes

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I am stationed at Fort Leonard Wood and travel a bit between Wood and St. Louis on United States Highway 66.

While a large percentage of this highway is four-lane, the three-lane section approaching St. Louis is the most dangerous. Your state is gradually eliminating most of this three-lane stretch and doing a fine job.

However, here is one suggestion that I feel could stop or prevent quite a few accidents until the three-lane area is converted to four-lane.

My suggestion is that a passing car, during the daylight hours, turn its headlights on before passing and off after passing. On a bright, sunny day it is almost impossible to tell if the car in the middle lane is coming or going.

By turning the headlights on it would be almost impossible to miss if the car is coming toward you.

My other suggestion is that headlights be turned on at the first hint of darkness. The valleys create shadows at dusk that an unlit car can be lost in.

Facade for Intimidation

If congressional committees can interrogate anybody about anything he writes or believes, where does that leave freedom of press and conscience? That is the question raised by the House Un-American Activities Committee's summons to John Cogley, former editor of the distinguished Catholic lay magazine The Commonweal.

Mr. Cogley had been employed by The Fund for the Republic to direct two studies of blacklisting in the entertainment field. These studies detail what is common knowledge in radio, television and the motion pictures. There is a nebulous yet effective system of blacklisting entertainers suspected of Communist associations, past or present. There is an equally nebulous system by which listed persons can seek "clearance" for their jobs.

For example, the American Legion once listed 300 suspected persons in motion pictures, admitting this list was compiled from "scattered public sources." Those on the list were expected to "write a letter" explaining their past associations in order to win clearance.

The newsletter Counterattack and such reports as "Red Channels" listed persons in radio and television, and these lists were culled from every conceivable hearing anywhere on Communism and no effort was made to judge whether alleged associations were either correct or meaningful.

After Mr. Cogley appeared before the committee, his testimony was subjected to violent criticism from witnesses whom he had mentioned in his reports. Both Vincent Hartnett, and James F. O'Neil, publisher of the American Legion magazine, denied vehemently that they helped "clear" anyone. They merely tried to "rehabilitate" entertainers once associated with Communism, they said.

The difference is one of words only. An actor who is rehabilitated in this parlance is also cleared; unrehabilitated, he has difficulty finding a job.

But if the committee hearings seem only to prove Mr. Cogley's point, that certainly was not their purpose. Mr. Cogley, was not invited to appear; he was ordered by subpoena. He was questioned sharply. Later witnesses were permitted to impugn his motives. He was treated more as a defendant than as an editor with a right to publish what he thought or saw.

In short, the blacklist hearing appears to have been a facade for retaliation against a writer whose findings displeased the House Un-American Activities Committee. But what if Congress had the right to summon any author whom it disagreed, or if writers generally lived in fear of being ordered before a committee for expressing their opinions? Free expression could not endure in such a climate of intimidation.

A Congressman certainly should know as well as any citizen that freedom of the press and its implicit companions, freedom of thought and conscience, are the exact opposite of un-American activities. They are foundations of the American way of life.

Fortunately the courts now before them in a case which should test the right of Congress to compel testimony on political opinions, and ought to provide an answer to the House Un-American Activities Committee's performance with Mr. Cogley. Such a performance should have a very short run on the American stage.

To Make Poultry Safer

Representative Leonor Sullivan of St. Louis has introduced a bill in Congress which would markedly improve the purity of much of the processed poultry sold. Existing laws do not safeguard frozen and other processed poultry the same as beef, pork, lamb and the red meats generally. Instead, there is a patchwork of several laws, all of them adding up to inadequacy.

The drive for improved legislation has been spearheaded by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America. That union is immediately concerned with the health of its 300,000 members. Some of them have died of diseases contracted by handling diseased fowl. Many others have suffered illness, including psittacosis (parrot fever), encephalitis (sleeping sickness) and Newcastle disease. There have been several epidemics of psittacosis among workers at poultry processing plants in recent years.

A fourth of all the food poisoning cases studied by the United States Public Health Service have been attributed to diseased poultry. In all, 25 diseases of poultry are transmissible to man, including diphtheria and tuberculosis.

Yet three fourths of the processed poultry sold is uninspected, and some of the inspection given to the remainder is so unreliable that it has been rejected by cities with better standards, among them Newark, N.J.

Representative Sullivan's efforts in behalf of trustworthy poultry inspection should be as heartily welcomed by the meat-packing industry as by consumers. As Mrs. Sullivan says, many housewives now hesitate to buy processed poultry because of the offenses of the unscrupulous. The industry as a whole will benefit from enabling the housewife to shop in confidence.

A Bus Monopoly?

The Justice Department has asked the federal district court in Detroit to order General Motors to end an alleged bus monopoly. Whatever comes of this suit, the case is bound to recall an anti-trust charge involving busses nearly 10 years ago.

General Motors was a party in both cases. It is the only defendant in the new case, but National City Lines, which controls St. Louis Public Service Co. and other transit firms, is named as co-conspirator. In the earlier case, National City Lines was the principal defendant, but G.M. was a defendant too.

Today General Motors is said to account for 85 per cent of all new bus sales, while more than 20 manufacturers have withdrawn from this field. The general charge is that G.M., National City and others conspired to monopolize manufacture and use of busses.

The 1947 case was slightly different. The charge then was that G.M., Firestone, Phillips, Standard Oil of California and other firms had invested heavily in National City Lines, and that consequently these firms enjoyed exclusive contracts to supply not only busses but gas, oil, etc., to National City's many transit companies in many cities.

In each case, however, bus monopolization was a principal factor, and G.M. and National City were the principal agents. National City and its co-defendants were found guilty in 1949 of conspiring to monopolize trade in busses and related products, and later it was announced that reforms had been instituted to meet the charges. Yet a similar charge is now made again.

Trial alone can disclose the true state of affairs in the bus business, and the public will watch the case with special interest. If the charges are true, and competition is being eliminated in both manufacture and use of busses, then it is possible that business costs and profits have been inflated. If so, the transit rider has been paying the bill. His bill is high enough now.

Manpower or Atomic Bomb?

The momentous question of reducing military manpower drastically and relying almost entirely upon an atomic defense has skyrocketed into public attention again. As is usual with much of the military news in recent months, much fog and many sparks accompany it.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who is credited in a New York Times dispatch with advancing the idea, refuses to deny or confirm it although he says more manpower cuts may be possible "ultimately." According to the Times dispatch, a proposal to make an 800,000-man cut by 1960 in the present authorized strength of 2,850,000 men has led to a "revolt" by the chiefs of the three armed services. The Strategic Air Command, with its reported power to deliver a devastating atomic attack any place in the world, would be the ace in the new military hand.

It is small wonder that there is said to be a furor in Congress as well as in the Pentagon over the Times dispatch. Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee, and long a power in military affairs, is reminding the press that Adm. Radford promised in January 1955 that there would be no more manpower cuts for at least five years.

There can be no doubt that it is expensive to have military forces in readiness for either a conventional war or an atomic war. There also can be no doubt that an atomic war would be a catastrophe beyond description. But there is doubt as to whether a military force equipped to fight only an atomic war would be a sufficient guarantee in itself to prevent war.

This Administration has shown itself very capable-minded in military affairs. There should be considerable pondering of the question, with money relegated to the background, before any decision is reached to stake everything on possession of a military force built primarily on the threat of a sudden and short nuclear war against any attacker.

Those Immoral Neutrals

As if the question of the Administration's views on neutrality were not already confused enough, Secretary Dulles at his press conference this week undertook to explain some previous remarks of his.

In a speech at Ames, Ia., last month, the Secretary of State referred to neutrality as "obsolete," and, except in unusual circumstances, "an immoral and short-sighted conception." Understandably, Nehru objected to this view, and it must be assumed that any other neutral would agree with him.

So Secretary Dulles explains. There are few neutrals of the immoral kind, he says. And he would not consider a nation neutral in the immoral sense if it belonged to the United Nations.

There are 76 members of the United Nations and almost no non-members which might be classed as neutrals. Indeed, about the only non-member neutral we can think of is Switzerland.

But Secretary Dulles hastened to add that he did not regard Switzerland as a neutral of the immoral kind—rather as one of those exceptional cases which he referred to in his original statement.

Is everything clear? The only point that bothers us is this:

What countries in the world was Secretary Dulles talking about in the first place?

To Len Hall it's all over but the convention.

A Stroll Through Crustumius

What would one do about it if one were sole owner of an ancient ghost city at the bottom of the Adriatic Sea? The question comes up because that is exactly the dilemma to which an Italian fisherman in Rimini aspires. One moonlight night he spied the shimmering outlines of buildings and streets beneath the water. A historian in town traced the lost city through a Fourth Century Latin text. For the fisherman, no dilemma is presented, in history either past or future: he means to take rubbernecking tourists in oxygen masks through the town at so much a head, and get rich.

Unassailably standard as is the ambition to get rich, we still think the Rimini fisherman is showing a lamentable lack of imagination. Our own choice of reaction would be to spend a good deal of the time gloating. Many others are rich. Many others are handsome. Many others are famous. But who else is proprietor of a metropolis beneath the waves? Who else can walk in fancy among his buildings, along his street, in the watered moonlight, where no one else has trod these 20 centuries?

He could even have cards printed. Giovanni Q. Pubblico (if that were his name), owner of the City of Crustumius (that is its name), Off and Down From the Coast of Italy. Or "Citizen of Crustumius"—that would be more dignified and singular still. Tourist seasons might come, and tourist seasons might go, but there Crustumius would lie, forever. Just being its owner, in the proper style, would be ever so much more spectacular than anything anyone could do about it.

The Present Utility of Art

There hardly could be a better demonstration that art is practical and not merely decorative than the architectural show at the City Art Museum through July 30. However a man may feel about the utility of a painting or a piece of sculpture, there can be no argument on this score in connection with a church, a school, a home or a factory.

Arguments there can be—and are—about architectural styles. Some agree with Henry L. Mencken that the best provisions for living are to be found in the Eighteenth Century English house; so that is the kind of house they want. Others perhaps would build all temples in the style of the Acropolis. Both are masterly, but surely there are advances—even if the progress be irregular—in the arts as in all other fields.

There is always the urge to express and to meet contemporary needs. Neither life nor the art which reflects it is static.

In expression, the present mood is not always fully realized. But surely if a period has vitality, it will have its artistic successes. And these rather than the ill-starred attempts should set the standards. If bad buildings have gone up in the name of modern architecture, that makes the City Art Museum show—arranged by the St. Louis chapter of the American Institute of Architects with the warm co-operation of Museum Director Nagel, himself an architect—all the more interesting and useful. It is a guide to the best expression of the here and the now.

A Gas Worker's Protest

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Laclede Gas Co. employee who went out on strike gives union's side of work stoppage in letter; accuses company of violating old contract before new one could be negotiated; says King-Thompson law gives utilities a 'club' against their employees.

A Letter to the Editor of the Post-Dispatch

I am (or was before state seizure) an employee in the service and installation department of the Laclede Gas Co. I have 12 years service and am in the top pay bracket of the service department. I was losing eight hours salary a day, 40 hours per week as long as we were on strike.

My family consists of a girl six years old—a boy 4 years old (who has come down with the mumps since the strike began) and an expectant addition that may have arrived by the time this letter is delivered. As a working man I have been able to get along fairly well—I am buying my home (a modest five room frame), own a 1951 automobile and have the usual worker's debts that must be paid regularly. So much for my family and its problems.

The gas workers went on strike July 1, 1956, due to a breakdown in contract negotiations. The workers of a private (and powerful) concern struck against their employer for a just, true and honest cause. Before the negotiating committees were able to discuss and submit to the membership provisions for a new contract, Laclede violated the contract that was in effect.

Our union officials, who are honest and sincere, decided that rather than follow the company's lead and call a strike breaking a contract that was made in good faith, they would make all attempts to straighten out the difficulties concerning "riser" connections and company sale of house heating burners. This they tried to do before the expiration date of the old contract. Finally a strike vote was taken and the result was 97.5 per cent of the members voting to strike.

What good is a contract if it is to be brushed aside? None! So we went on strike for the first time in 21 years.

The first day the company said, So what? We have supervisors on the job who can handle all the inside work and automatic devices that make up the control system, and barring any serious breakdowns we can hold up and break the strike easily.

EXCELLENT CONCERT BY LITTLE SYMPHONY

Charming Cimarosa Melodies, Flashing Mozart 'Haffner' Work Dominate.

BY THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Mozart and Cimarosa provided the major elements of interest at last night's excellently played concert by the Little Symphony Orchestra in Washington University Quadrangle. Jascha Heifetz conducted and George Hussey, English horn player of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, was the soloist in Cimarosa's Concerto for Oboe in E Flat.

This work was pieced together from several of the composer's keyboard works, but the stylistic similarity of its fragile and charming melodies gave it as much unity as it needed. The arrangement was made by Arthur Benjamin.

Hussey's performance was notable for its sensibility. Through his expressive tone and a certain freedom and timing, he added a little more depth to the music—enough, at least, to make it more than an elegant triflery.

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony was executed with a gratifying combination of flexibility and cohesiveness. Something is always lost in an outdoor performance, but Heifetz was unusually successful in preserving the compactness of each movement, in articulating the string rushes clearly, and in exacting a suitably wide range of dynamics. The frequent alternations of loud and soft in identical phrases were delivered effectively and consistently. So Mozart's flashing exuberance in the two fast movements, the serenity of the Andante, the forthright energy of the Menuetto and the autumnal melancholy of the trio all came off in style.

Honegger's Symphony No. 2 for Strings and Trumpet proved to be modern in temper, as well as in language; that is to say, it betrayed inner perturbation in terms of biting harmonies and angular melody. An arresting stroke of inventiveness came at the conclusion when the trumpet, entering for the first time in a texture strongly colored by preceding dissonance, played a broad and euphonious chorale. It was a strong work, executed with intensity, which deserved closer attention from the audience than it probably got.

The program was rounded out and given a change of color and mood by Grieg's "Lyric Suite," whose sentimental flights were treated with an appropriate expressiveness.

U.S. AUTHORIZES EXPORT OF SHEET STEEL TO RUSSIA

WASHINGTON, July 14 (AP)—The shipment of $1,100,000 worth of sheet steel to Russia for use in making automobile bodies has been approved by the Administration, a Department of Commerce official disclosed last night.

It was the first time the sale of any sheet steel to an Iron Curtain country had been made since 1947, the official said.

The decision to approve the sale was made after full consultation between various Government agencies such as the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency, the International Co-operation Administration and the Treasury.

Issuance of the license in May was before the United States was confronted with a steel strike.

The Commerce official said he was unable to identify the shippers because of restrictions in the export act. There was no immediate indication whether the shipment had already left this country.

REGINALD DRANT DIES, WAS METALLURGICAL ENGINEER

Reginald Drant, consulting and metallurgical engineer, was found dead yesterday in his home, 4 Ladue Hills, Olivette. Physicians said that Mr. Drant, who previously had been in good health, died of a heart attack. He was 66 years old.

The attack apparently occurred Thursday morning shortly after he had called his office and told associates he would be in later. His body was discovered by a woman who arrived to clean the house.

Mr. Drant, who was born in Philadelphia and was a graduate of Lehigh University, was associated in a consulting engineering firm with Harry H. Kessler. They were co-owners of Sorbo-Mat Process Engineers with offices in Clayton. The firm is a consultant for many foundries. He is survived by his wife, Beatrice; a son, Reginald Jr., and two daughters, Karen and Barbara. They were vacationing in Florida at the time of his death.

WYTHE WILLIAMS DIES, PRESS CLUB FOUNDER

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch, July 14—Wythe Williams, founding president of the Overseas Press Club of America, died yesterday. He was 74 years old.

Mr. Williams started his career as a reporter in 1905 on the Minneapolis Tribune. In 1909 he became a reporter for the New York World.

His books included "Passed by the Censor," "This Flesh," "Dusk of Empire," "Riddle of the Reich," "Washington Broad-cast" and "Tiger of France."

Duke of Medinael Dies. MADRID, July 14 (AP)—Luis Jesus Fernandez de Cordoba y Salabert, seventeenth Duke of Medinael and holder of one of the oldest titles of Spanish nobility, died yesterday of a heart attack. He was 76 years old. He was eight times a duke, 17 a marquis, 15 count, and four a viscount.

SUMMER WORKSHOP HELD FOR CHAPLAINS

Lutheran Pastors Who Serve Institutions Attend Sessions at Concordia.

By JOHN T. STEWART
Church Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Thirty Lutheran pastors who are serving as chaplains in various institutions took part this week in a workshop at Concordia Seminary. They heard lectures by specialists in their field and took part in discussions and demonstrations in theology, psychology, and "techniques of communication."

The participants included pastors who are engaged full time or part time in religious work in public and private institutions, and came from all parts of the country.

The workshop was sponsored by the Department of Social Welfare of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

A workshop in psychology and psychiatry was conducted by Dr. Ernest H. Parsons, neuropsychiatrist, and an assistant clinical professor at Washington University School of Medicine.

The Rev. Dr. Martin H. Scharlemann of Concordia Seminary led a course on the "Healing Ministry of Jesus." He served 12 years as a chaplain in the armed forces, and at present is mobilization assignment chaplain in the office of the chief of Air Force chaplains with the rank of colonel.

Other workshop leaders and their subjects included the Rev. Reuben C. Baerwald of Alton, Ill., theology of pastoral care; the Rev. John S. Angle, supervisor of Lutheran chaplaincy services in Michigan, communications; Forrest C. Orr, clinical psychologist at Veterans Administration Hospital, St. Louis, and professor of psychology at Washington University, mental hygiene; the Rev. Edward J. Mahnke, chaplain of Lutheran Hospital, St. Louis, the chaplain and the staff; the Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Repp of Concordia Seminary, visual and audio aids, and the Rev. John J. Pfister of the seminary, broadcasting techniques.

The Rev. Dr. Herman A. Mayer, secretary of missions for the Missouri Synod, is a member of a synod delegation that will take part in theological discussions in Germany, England and France. Afterwards, he will visit Lutheran churches in the Scandinavian countries and in Belgium, France, Germany and England, in the interest of evangelism and stewardship. Mrs. Mayer is accompanying her husband.

The Rev. Dr. Karl Kurth, executive secretary of the missionary board of the Synodal Conference, is making his third visit to Lutheran missions in Nigeria. He is accompanied by the Rev. Edwin L. Wilson, chairman of the synodical conference missionary board and pastor of the Lutheran Church of Our Saviour, 2854 Abner place, St. Louis.

Cards Survive Umpires' Disagreement and Confusion for Victory

Giants Protest Game After Officials Differ On 'Trapped Ball' Play

By Jack Rice

The most-umpired game of the year, a real judiciary gem with more decisions than it knew what to do with, is on National League President Warren Giles's desk today in the form of umpires' reports and an official protest from the New York Giants. The Cardinals had a protest written out, too, but they won the game and in that case it's customary to be big about the whole thing and forget it.

Decisions came and went and collided head on and just sort of lay there, looking silly, in the Cardinals fifth inning last night against the Giants at Busch Stadium. The Cardinals eventually won the game, 7 to 5, and independent of the decision in the concrete matter of runs scored at the time. There was the academic point that perhaps the decision altered the order of men who came to bat for the Cardinals in subsequent innings. Maybe. Who's going to prove it?

What the going-on in the Cardinals' fifth inning did prove to be was a distraction from the excellent efforts of the first three men in the Cardinals' batting order, Don Blasingsame, former Giant Alvin Dark, and all-time Cardinal Stan Musial. Dark and Blasingsame both had four successive hits and theirs was the punch, one-two, that eventually won the game. The three of them had 10 of the Cardinals' hits.

Boyer Blow Raises Issue. They should have saved it for another night, so goes it as a conversation piece goes. At game end the patient souls among the 15,647 ticket buyers, the ones who stayed for all three hours and 19 minutes of their money's worth still had their question on the Cardinals' fifth inning. It was a place to pause and ponder, and four umpires did exactly that.

Plade Umpire Bill Jackowski, and Umpires Lee Ballantaff, Stan Crawford and Art Gore, reading from first to third around the bases, were peacefully working a nice close ball game in the Cardinal fifth. With the bases loaded and none out, Musial batted in a run with a sacrifice fly. Blasingsame held second.

Ken Boyer, having an undistinguished night at bat, next lined a ball into left-center. Henry Thompson made a diving effort to catch it. Gore, standing at third, watched the Yankees, threatening to make a demonstration of bat mastery with a double to right.

Jim Konstanty maintained the victory for Colum by retiring the Giants in the ninth, a tidy one-two-three job that required no batters to go into dives, and no umpires to wish they had taken up something easy, like corporation law.

Vinegar Bend Mizell will pitch for the Cardinals today against the Giants. Mizell's record is 8 and 7, and Al Dark's best seems against Vinegar's best. He has won the first two games of the series with his winning and shows no signs of wanting against his former mates. Al Worthington was the Giants' scheduled pitcher for the 2 1/2 games.

The Cardinals announced that all reserved seats have been sold for their double-header against the Dodgers on Sunday, July 22, at Busch Stadium. However, 7000 general admission and bleacher seats will be on sale when the gates open at 10:30 a.m. that day.

The beginning was good for the Cardinals' best extra-base hit was Blasingsame's opening triple in the third. His follow-up friend, Dark, singled him home, the first of Dark's three RBIs. Musial also had three RBIs.

All Trapped---Ball, Players and Umps

New York Giants Manager BILL RIGNEY (No. 18) debates with the umpires the question of whether the Cardinals were retired on a double play in the fifth inning. Confusion arose when Umpires ARTIE GORE (facing Rigney) and HENRY CRAWFORD (second from right) gave conflicting rulings on Leftfielder Henry Thompson's handling of Ken Boyer's fly to left center. Plate Umpire BILL JACKOWSKI, with mask in hand, is at left; LEE BALLANFANT at right. Rigney lost the 20-minute-long argument and the game. (Associated Press Photo)

Adcock Hits Grand Slammer, Drives in Seven Tallies as Braves Move to Loop Lead

NEW YORK, July 14 (UPI)—Milwaukee shouldered its way back into first place in the National League today and the guy leading the way was big, jolting Joe Adcock, who bombarded the Dodgers so hard that it may take them a long time to dig out.

Brooklyn pitchers are picked up the victory in relief of Warren Hacker.

The Yankees, threatening to make a runaway of the American League race, stretched their lead to 8½ games by routing the Indians, 10-0, for their seventh victory in a row.

Tom Sturdivant pitched his first major league shutout in limiting the Tribe to two hits, while Moose Skowron drove in the first four Yankee runs with a single and a homer. Early Wynn suffered the loss. The victory was Sturdivant's eighth against two losses.

Adcock blasted his fourteenth homer of the season with one on off Don Newcombe to cap a six-run rally in the first inning of the opener and then returned to smash his fifteenth homer with the bases full off Carl Erskine in the sixth inning.

Something about Brooklyn's pitching seems to bring out the best in Adcock, who drove in five of Milwaukee's runs in the finale. He had seven RBIs for the night. He hit seven homers in 13 games against the Dodgers this season and battered Brooks still remember how he hammered four homers and a double in one game against his former mates.

Philie Drop Redliers.

Adcock's homer in last night's nightcap equaled his total for 1955 and wiped out a 4-1 Dodger lead. Jackie Robinson homered to tie the score at 5-all in the eighth, but the Braves won in the bottom of the frame when Danny O'Connell had a sacrifice fly with the bases full. Ernie Johnson was the winner in the first game, while Lew Burdette gained his tenth victory in a relief role.

Rookie Lou Skizas's first major league highlight was a three-run first inning that proved enough margin for Kansas City's 3-2 win over Baltimore.

Skizas hit his homer off Jim Konstanty in the ninth.

The two victories put the Braves a full game ahead of the Redlegs, who dropped a 6-4 decision to the Phillies.

The Cardinals' best extra-base hit was Blasingsame's opening triple in the third. His follow-up friend, Dark, singled him home, the first of Dark's three RBIs. Musial also had three RBIs.

The beginning was good for the Giants last night. They got away quickly, knocking out Murry Dickson in the first inning. Bill White's homer with a man on was the major damage.

White doubled to start himself toward another run, and a 4-1 Giant lead, in the third inning.

The Cardinals' best extra-base hit was Blasingsame's opening triple in the third. His follow-up friend, Dark, singled him home, the first of Dark's three RBIs. Musial also had three RBIs.

Dodgers Recall Fernandez.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., July 14 (UPI)—The Brooklyn Dodgers recalled shortstop Chic Fernandez from their Montreal farm club. Brooklyn brought up the tall, 24-year-old Fernandez to take Don Zimmer's place on its roster. Zimmer, 28, was struck in the face by a pitched ball thrown by Hal Jeffcoat of the Cubs on June 23, has been placed on the disabled list.

Giants Haltan Chased.

Dick was dispatched to see one-base and Boyer was told he had first base as a gift and at long last the world had a deserving variation on "Who's on first?" in the form of decided, first, who's on?

In the Cardinal dugout, Grady Hatton, a man of inquisitive intellect, asked an umpire how Blasingsame could be out at third when he hadn't really come near the bag, and how two guys who had been on first base together could be safe at first and second? His deep thirst for knowledge got him thrown out of the game, into the quiet clubhouse, the better to read the rulebook and decide he'd never seen anything like it.

Rip Repulski filed out, and the inning was ended. This contented most Cardinals who the Giants' protest didn't have a post-decision Cardinal run to stand on.

The Cardinals scored two more runs in the seventh and two in the eighth, and these stood nicely on their own merits. Blasingsame began the seventh by lining a single off Dick Littlefield's glove, and went to third on Dark's left-field double. Blasingsame scored on Musial's single, Dark on Boyer's single.

Jack Colum led off the Cards' eighth with a single, went to second as Blasingsame was hit by a Hoyt Wilhelm pitch, and the Pitcher Colum went to the bench as Chuck

Semifinals to Be Played in Muny Tennis

The No. 1 seeded Al Holtzman meets Neil Drury (4) and the defending titleholder, Ralph Hart, seeded No. 3, plays the second ranking Earl (Butch) Buchholz in the men's singles semifinal matches of the Muny tennis tournament today at 1 p.m. on the Jefferson Memorial Courts in Forest Park. The final will be played tomorrow at 6 o'clock.

End of the Line

Skid marks and a battered barrier bear witness to determined approach of drivers on Fall River (Mass.) Expressway. Temporary ending of the roadway is marked by a flashing red signal, a reflector sign 1500 feet from the barrier and a shining red arrow, six flashing red lights and reflectors on the barrier. Longest of the skid marks, 250 feet, indicated driver was traveling at 60 miles an hour when he failed to make the turn.

U.S. PLANNING NEW OFFER ON DISARMAMENT

Administration Studies Idea to Convert Some
A-Bomb Material to Peaceful Uses.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON, July 14 (AP)—
The Eisenhower Administration is reported to be working on a new disarmament proposal under which some materials now in atomic bombs would be converted to peaceful uses.

The proposal would be designed to get Russia to join with the Western atomic powers in a system of orderly withdrawal of nuclear materials from its weapons arsenals and their diversion to peaceful purposes.

It was learned today that some discussion of this idea may be a principal point of President Eisenhower's next letter to Soviet Premier Bulganin on the subject of disarmament.

The detailed proposal, if the National Security Council finally agrees on it as firm United States policy, may also be proposed during the next round of negotiations in the United Nations Disarmament subcommittee.

Harold E. Stassen, Mr. Eisenhower's disarmament adviser, told a news conference yesterday that "we are considering what further initiatives the United States might take to improve the prospects for peace with special reference to modern arms and conventional armaments in the world today."

He conferred with the President at Gettysburg, Pa., Thursday.

Mr. Eisenhower told Bulganin in a letter last spring that he thought it extremely important that the great powers should take measures to bring the nuclear threat "under control."

In the absence of any inspection system adequate to detect hidden stores of weapons, Mr. Eisenhower and Stassen are understood to feel that the best way to do this is to get an agreement which would have two effects.

In the first place, it would secure the diversion of further atomic production from military stores to peaceful uses under a system of safeguards.

In the second place it would provide for the withdrawal from the military stores already accumulated of atomic explosives for conversion to peaceful purposes.

How these general aims might be achieved in detail has not been disclosed and apparently has not been fully worked out. However, all the big powers, including Russia, have agreed to create an international atomic-for-peace agency to promote peaceful uses of atomic energy on a world scale. This agency could receive atomic materials from all countries.

Contributions from individual countries, including Russia, would have the result of reducing their supplies on hand even though those supplies were not known.

On other aspects of disarmament Mr. Stassen told his news conference the Eisenhower Administration considers it important to develop "the concept of partners for peace" in disarmament negotiations and to continue these negotiations in the U.N. subcommittee, although Russia has branded its work as useless.

He said he expects that the subcommittee will resume work in the fall, and new American proposals will be completed by that time.

Stassen made clear that the

MINNEAPOLIS JUDGE TO ACT IN TAX CASES

G. H. Nordby to Replace Hulen in Caudle-Connally Inquiry.

United States District Judge Gunnar H. Nordby of Minneapolis was assigned yesterday to hear motions and fix sentences in the cases of T. Lamar Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, and Matthew J. Connally, appointments secretary to President Truman, who were convicted here June 14 of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Assignment of Judge Nordby to replace the late Judge Rubey M. Hulen was made by Chief Judge Archibald K. Gardner of the United States Court of Appeals.

Martha Carr's OPINION

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers, who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

I AM a girl of 17. I went with a boy for about a month, then we broke up. I like him very much. The other night he called unexpectedly and asked me out. We went for a ride and he stopped the car and tried to get fresh. I let him know I was mad and didn't say much on the way home. I wish you would give me your opinion on my problem. Should I go out with him again, if he asks me?

UNDECIDED TEEN-AGER.

It depends on whether you think he learned from your reaction how he should behave when he is with you. It would have been better had you been able to let him know you didn't like his conduct without actually getting angry and causing an awkward situation, but you were certainly right to speak up for what you think is right. It's hard for girls to believe this, but many boys really do admire them a great deal more if they insist on courtesy and respect. However, wise girls command this kind of treatment by their own ladylike and mature behavior so that the boys instinctively want to be gentlemanly and thoughtful.

Dear Martha:

I HAVE GONE OUT with a boy a few times and now he claims he is in love with me. I feel it would be better if we quit dating each other, but my friends tell me I would be stupid to tell him that. I am not in love with him and sincerely think I am too young to know what real love is. I am only 15. I would like to know what to say to him.

CONFUSED.

What would your friends have you do? Lead the poor fellow along and let him think you really do care for him? No, you're smart not to want to become serious with anyone right now. If you don't like him as well as he apparently likes you, I agree that it might be better to stop seeing him, or at least date him less frequently. When he starts with the sweet talk, tell him that you like him but you aren't in love and you don't want him to spoil your friendship by becoming too serious. It could be, of course, that if you continued to date him for another year or two or three, you might learn to love him a great deal, but don't let yourself get so involved with him now, especially since you don't care much for him, that it will be increasingly awkward to break up. It's only fair to let him know how you feel.

Write today for Martha Carr's free leaflets written especially for teen-agers, "E for Etiquette" and "Masculine Popularity." Be sure to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Do It Today

By Ruth Millett

HOW long have you been putting off doing the things you really want to do? Are you kidding yourself that you will do this "when the children are older," do something else when "we get a home of our own?"

No matter how long it has been—it's been too long.

You have been wasting your time, living in the future instead of in the present. You are refusing to admit that you really are just making excuses.

YOU MAY NOT be able to do exactly what you want to do right now, or get exactly what you want to get. But if you give your wants a little thought you'll see that if you can't get exactly what you want you can try for a reasonable substitute.

You don't need to put off doing things with your husband "until the children are older."

If you plan, you can work in a weekend trip now and then, or get a day off, yourself, when your husband has a day off.

You don't have to put off fixing up the house until George is making more money.

TOGETHER, the two of you can do countless things to make your home more livable and more attractive. Why wait until you can do things exactly as you wish to if you can make small improvements right now?

You may live in a small apartment or a rented house that isn't very convenient or attractive. But you don't have to put off entertaining friends until your setup is just the way you want it.

You can figure out numerous ways of entertaining a few persons if you really want to. So why not be strengthening your friendships right now instead of kidding yourself that you can't return hospitality until you get that dream house?

Planning for tomorrow is important. But it shouldn't take the place of living and accomplishing something today.

LONDON.

ILLEGARDINE NEFF, late of "Silk Stockings" on Broadway and before that Hollywood, has bought herself a big chalet in St. Moritz . . . Joan Harrison, in and out of London, misses her old boss, Alfred Hitchcock. She was as mysterious as usual when I asked, "What's new?" I believe she is preparing something for television.

The funniest play in London is Alec Guinness' "Hotel Paradise" or rather, I should say Alec, Martha Hunt and Irene Worth in the Peter Glenville-directed French farce, also translated by Peter. All three are fabulous. But when I went backstage to congratulate Guinness, he smiled sadly and asked, "Was it very warm out front?" He must want blood because I never laughed so much in my life.

AUTHOR ANITA LOOS ("Gentlemen Prefer Blondes") switched from London to Paris to finish the details of her new play, from the Benelijmans biography of the late Lila Mendl, which will star Helen Hayes. Then Anita, brave gal, tackles the life story of Zsa Zsa Gabor. Spotted Mary Pickford and husband Buddy Rogers sipping at my favorite restaurant here, Caprice, and I told me, "We slipped into England without any fanfare, because we want a chance to enjoy ourselves with the English people." Next stop for Mary and Buddy is the Errol Flynn yacht the Zaca, now off Majorca, which they have rented for the summer.

STEPHEN BOYD, so good in Clifton Webb's "The Man Who Never Was," goes to Tyrone Power's "Seven Waves Away," for which the British Navy is building a huge 35,000-gallon water tank.

Top British stars Finlay Currie and Marie Lohr are also in the picture, which Hollywood's Ted Richmond is producing here.

Grammar by Gobel.

QUESTION: It seems to me that I often hear things like "We don't never go there nowadays" or "You don't hardly see that kind no more." Are such statements good grammar? T.C.K., Oakland, Calif.

ANSWER: I suspect we can credit "Lonesome George" Gobel of television fame for the recent vogue of such double negatives. His remarks to the effect that "you don't hardly find that kind no more" are, of course, double negatives, consciously used for comic effect.

In fact, the Gobel sentence comes perilously close to being a triple negative, since "hardly" is, in effect, a third negative meaning "not probably."

Aside from such use of double negatives for deliberative comic effect, however, you'll not find them in the speech or writing of literate persons.

Simply remember that if you want to express a negative idea, one negative is enough.

QUESTION: There's a fellow in our office who insists on pronouncing "dictionary" as DIK-shun-ree and "secretary" as SEK-ruh-tree. To the rest of us this sounds very affected. What's more, I think he's just plain wrong, because each of these words has four syllables and the way he says them is only pronouncing three syllables. Who is right? S.M.A., Toledo, O.

ANSWER: Your office mate has probably been watching too many British movies. The pronunciations to which you object are perfectly acceptable in Great Britain, but they are not in accord with standard American pronunciation.

Actually, we Americans pronounce these words with a primary accent, on the first syllable and a secondary stress on the next-to-last syllable. Say each of them aloud and you'll see what I mean.

Actually, we Americans pronounce these words with a primary accent, on the first syllable and a secondary stress on the next-to-last syllable. Say each of them aloud and you'll see what I mean.

QUESTION: The British tend to obscure or omit entirely that secondary stress—and the result is SEK-ruh-tree and DIK-shun-ree.

Unless your office mate is working on a transfer to your London branch, he had better start working on his pronunciation to make it conform to American standards.

Yes, according to many surveys. In "The Adolescent Years," William W. Watterberg produces abundant evidence regarding specific points of disagreement familiar to parents. A canvass of 15,000 youngsters in 100 high schools disclosed just three items on which only one-fifth registered complaints against parents: (1) Inability to discuss personal problems with parents. (2) Failure of parents to accept children as "responsible." (3) Refusal to discuss sex.

THREE questions about our solar system will be answered today.

Q. How many planets are there in the solar system?

A. There are nine main planets—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto, besides the Earth. In addition there are hundreds of asteroids.

The asteroids may be of a planet which once existed between the Earth and Venus, or for example.

There are, however, certain factors to consider. In the first place, a planet which followed the same pathway should keep 25,000,000 or 50,000,000 miles ahead, or else should trail the Earth by that many miles. If two large objects such as the Earth and Venus came within half a million miles of each other, terrible things would happen. Ocean tides would rise so high that all the continents would be flooded.

The intense gravity pull between the planets might cause one, or both, to explode. Aside from that, people would need plenty of water if they went to the other planet. They also would need the same amount and kind of air.
